Industrial Aesthetic:

The modern industrial aesthetic had a profound mark on art and architecture when it first took hold in the 1950’s. As it had in the past, economic changes in America and Europe led to changes in the art and design. During the 1950s the economy grew and as a result, construction increased to provide families with new ranch-style homes. The architectural style was becoming more industrialized, and this sparked interest in goods that paralleled modern materials. The coin or stud design flooring celebrates this machine made uniform aesthetic that stood far apart from its predecessors the rustic wood floors.

Environmentally Conscious:

The “Coin-Grip” step mats are made from natural and recycled rubber materials which makes them highly eco-friendly and affordable products.

Traction:

The “Coin-Grip” texture of these stair mats offer excellent traction through it’s patterned rubber surface. Rubber’s high coefficient of friction is enhanced thanks to this type of surface pattern. This product is designed for pathways and stairs with extensive foot traffic.

Safety:

The added traction from the coin patterned texture on these stair mats increases safety by keeping feet secure on the mat’s surface. Use these step mats in areas with high foot traffic to help prevent dangerous accidents.

Cleaning:

Since these products offer moderate chemical resistance, they can be cleaned with most household cleaners. Strong, highly caustic cleaning solutions (bleach) are not recommended.
